SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and There.

Willie Kaye, of New Westminster, has been challenged by Percy Jenns, late of Victoria, but now employed at Vancouver, to run a bicycle race for a medal or for pure sport.

Everything has been satisfactorily arranged for a glove contest of 10 rounds for $150 a side between Dan O'Donnell, of San Francisco, and Bill Waters, of Victoria, both parties having put up a deposit of $40 each as a guarantee of good faith, the final deposit to be made on Saturday, (to-day) to the stake holders, Bill Philips and T. J. Ridehalgh. The contest is to take place in Philharmonic Hall on Monday the 15th inst.

VANCOUVER WINS.

The Vancouver-Victoria lacrosse match, played at Brocton Point on Saturday was won by the Vancouvers. Some difficulty arose over a foul, and the match was not played to a finish, but as the Vancouvers had the first game the match was given to them.

The Fort Crescent Blast.

Mr. T. F. Sinclair and a party of gentlemen took a run over to Port Crescent on the steamer Emma yesterday morning to have a look at the big blasting contract the former has over there. An excursion is being arranged by Mr. Sinclair to go over and see the blast fired which will be in about two weeks. The trip will be a very pleasant one, weather permitting, and no doubt the blast, which is to be a very large one, will be well worth seeing.

Bishop Courtney.

Right Rev. Dr. Courtney, Bishop of Nova Scotia, preached an eloquent sermon in Christ Church Cathedral on Sunday morning; and at St. John's in the evening, and on both occasions to very large assemblages. Bishop Courtney is a very fluent and graceful speaker, eloquent in his sincerity and forcefulness, and original in his presentation of a subject. The Right Reverend gentleman and Mrs. Courtney will leave for the east in the morning.

Do Not Be Deceived.

"In Darkest Africa" is the title of Mr. Stanley's book. All others are bogus.

ARE HER COURTS OPENED?

SIDNEY WEBSTER SAYS AMERICAN COURTS ARE OPEN.

Researches Made Show That They Are Not—The Case of the W. P. Sayward Still Pending—No Appeal Possible From the Sitka Court.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 8.—The mysterious death occurred at Fitch hospital this morning of Chas. Kelly, who has recently figured as an important witness in an inquest held by Coroner Kennedy to ascertain the cause of death of Patrick Cox, alias Patrick Murphy, who was found unconscious on Main street on Saturday evening August 23rd, and who died in that State the following morning from a fractured skull. Kelly has been confined at police headquarters until a few days ago when he was released on parole not to leave the city.

Poisonous Flavorings.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 8.—W. Hart and family, living at Westwood, Ohio, six in all, were poisoned last night by eating lemon pudding into which a patent pudding flavoring had been placed. All who ate the pudding were attacked with symptoms of arsenical poisoning. By the aid of physicians they were relieved, but are still in a critical condition.

A Green Switchman.

TROY, Sept. 8.—At 9:30 this morning a green switchman who took the place of a striker at State street crossing in this city, threw the switch before the rear truck of the Albany local train had passed, and the end of the car was carried over against a locomotive standing on the other track and partially turned over against a stone wall at the north end of Congress street tunnel. The last car was completely wrecked, and the next car ahead badly damaged. Of twelve passengers in the rear car at the time all escaped but one, E. J. Bliss, of Boston, who was cut on the face and head by broken glass.

Run to Earth.

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 8.—As a direct result of the investigation furnished by road detectives Pinkerton, Humphreys, Devine and Jackson, together with a local force, ran down two men this morning. The men are John Cordial, 34 years of age, conductor, and John Kearnan, 36 years of age, brakeman. Both are Knights of Labor strikers. They were arrested on warrants sworn out by Justice Griffith of Troy at the instance of the New York Central railway, and charged with train wrecking.

A Political Exile.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—General Antonio Naccox, a mulatto, arrived here to-day from Cuba. He was placed on board a vessel by the Spanish authorities by order of the Capt.-General. He was prominent in the Cuban revolution and was in command of the eastern district of the island. He signed the capitulation of San Juan, which put a final stop to hostilities. After the downfall of the Cuban Republic he went to Jamaica, where he has lived almost continually until his recent return to Cuba. He says: "I had returned to Cuba with the intention of living there quietly, but the Capt.-General seemed to be afraid of me; I don't know why, except for my political antecedents. I was stirring up no revolution. At present a successful one in Cuba is impossible. My family and my personal effects were placed on the steamer with me. Where I shall go next, I don't know."

Good Sound Advice.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—At to-day's session of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion church conference, now meeting here, there was a heated discussion over the fact that many ministers are short in the payment to the general fund. Bishop Lomax closed the debate with a vigorous speech, in which he said that if the older ministers could not do their duty by the church, the younger men would be selected. He admonished them to cease digging out classical sermons to their congregations, and to talk common sense, and advised them in case they could not make a better showing, to leave the pulpit, hire a mule and go plowing.

AN ABSURD PROPOSITION.

England Must Exhaust Her Remedies in American Courts.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—In a recent interview with the Paris correspondent of the Herald, Sidney Webster said: "Secretaries Bayard and Blain could each have properly enough said to England that our courts are open to vessels and persons inconvenienced, and England must exhaust her remedies before she invokes diplomacy."

A Herald's Washington correspondent to-day says: "Researches made have disclosed the fact that so far back as the winter of 1887, an appeal to the supreme court has been taken in the case of the British schooner W. P. Sayward, condemned to forfeiture in the district court of Alaska for sealing in Behring Sea many miles from the nearest land, and the British authorities had used every effort towards bringing the case to a hearing and decision, but were frustrated by the omission of Congress to provide for appeals in maritime cases from the district court in Alaska to any intermediate circuit court or direct to the supreme court. This omission made the decree of condemnation rendered by the district court at Sitka the penalty so far as the judicial department of the Government is concerned."

RECIPROCITY.

What Would Happen in the Event of its Being Brought About.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Senator Sherman's scheme for reciprocity with Canada has found a great deal of favor. Congressman Hill, chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, is enthusiastic in its favor. He said this morning: "The present Tory Government of Canada has what is called a standing offer of reciprocity, but it is limited to a list of agricultural products which they export to the United States, and which we never send to Canada; and this is frequently referred to by the Tory voters who desire to trade with the United States, and which Sir John Macdonald and his followers by this offer claim they would be forced to offer us. We would probably sell to them with unrestricted reciprocity one hundred million dollars worth of our goods and products per annum, and that trade would go on increasing. We had a one-sided and unfair reciprocity under the treaty of 1854, which was so unsatisfactory that we terminated it. But even under that arrangement trade with Canada increased by leaps and bounds. With reciprocity, their tariff in the meanwhile standing against Europe, we would sell them within five nearly everything they get outside their limits. That is, most of the imports of Canada would be drawn from the United States. On the other hand she would reap greater advantages by entering upon new prosperity like one one of our western states."

EUROPEAN NEWS.

TWO LADIES AGREE TO FIGHT

The Amiable Pastime Nipped in the Bud by the Opportune Appearance of the Police—The Parliamentary Labor Congress—Postmaster Raikes in Trouble.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The New York World correspondent sends the following cablegram: "Two ladies indulge in a duel, with swords as weapons. Jealousy the cause." These sensational head lines appear in a leading daily over a Paris dispatch this morning. The story, as told is unique. A French lady accused an American lady of attempting to alienate the affections of her husband. Both ladies met at the Cafe Americane and made a scene. As soon as the French woman made her charges, the American became indignant and told her she must be dreaming, as she had never spoken to the Frenchman. Madame waxed wrath, and slapped her American cousin with her gloved hand and told her she could prove her assertions. She then referred to her meeting with her husband, on the boulevard des Italians. The whole story the American lady said was an outrageous falsehood and she gave the French woman twenty-four hours in which to retract her words. At the end of this period, no notice having been taken of the insult, the American lady challenged her antagonist to a duel. The latter accepted, and said she would fight with swords. Everything being arranged, they with their friends, repaired to Meridon woods on Thursday morning. All was ready when three gendarmes stepped up and arrested the doctor and principals and took them to the sub-perfecture. Some lady friends of the French madame, it is alleged, gave information to the police in advance, and they were in hiding to prevent bloodshed. The lieutenant of police was sent for, and after listening to the report of his men said it was perhaps as rational for the women to fight duels as for men, but as it happened to be an offense against the French laws, and it was the duty of the police to arrest all persons engaged in it. A certain discretion was permitted, however, where the offense as in this case had no been actually committed. If the parties would give him their parole d'honneure not to attempt aother breach of the peace, and deliver to him their weapons, which would be confiscated, he would release them. Both ladies then made a plea for the doctor, who had been prevailed upon to accompany them, and he, too, was released. The names of the persons were refused by the police, who merely declared that the ladies stood high in social circles, and as they were not likely to meet again, there was no necessity to publish their identity. At the clubs the affair is discussed and regret expressed that the fight had been stopped, as a little blood-letting was the worst that could have happened and would have established a precedent.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The election of Chas. Fenwick, M.P., as Secretary of the Parliamentary Labor Committee by the Liverpool Trades Unions Congress is considered a wise move. The morning newspapers generally commend it as likely to improve the character of work done by the committee. The scene in the Congress when Mr. Broadhurst, who has held the secretaryship for fifteen years, made his farewell address was a touching one. A sensation has been caused among the trades union men by the result of the prosecution of President Inwood of the National Boot Makers' Union, on the charge of attempting to influence the manager of a factory at Coventry to join the striking employees of the establishment. Inwood was convicted and fined $50.

Public indignation has again been aroused against Postmaster-General Raikes on account of his continued petty persecution of the postmen who were dismissed because they sought to secure better treatment, and Raikes, it appears, has induced an association for finding employment for discharged soldiers and others, to refuse their friendly service to dismissed postmen.

Extensive precautions are being made on the Olphert estate near Falcarragh for the eviction of Bathone tenants who adhere to the plan of campaign. They number about two hundred and fifty souls.

M. Depouirte, French director of railways, is in Russia for the purpose of studying the system of cheap railway construction so successfully carried out in that country.

A watchmaker named Georing, who was a soldier in Napoleon's army which retreated from Moscow, has just died at Hamburg, aged 406 years.

Shipowners at Melbourne have cabled the newly formed shipowners union in England that they are making a powerful combination with the view of joining.

Advices from China report the Yellow river againg on the rampage. The river has burst its dikes in Shan-tung district and flooded a vast area of country. Thousands of persons have been drowned and a widespread famine has resulted.

More Labor Troubles.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Coal porters, dock laborers sailors and firemen at Southampton have struck against the employment of non-union men. Non-unionists going from this city to take their places were menaced by pickets paced at the railway stations by the strikers.

THE LABOR CONGRESS.

Chinese in Mines—Demand for a Canadian as Governor-General.

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—At the Labor Congress to-day the following resolutions were unanimously adopted: Moved by Thomas Salmon, seconded by George Bartley, "That in the opinion of this Congress, the employment of Chinese labor in mines should be prohibited by law, and a penalty be inflicted of $50 for each offense against all owners of mines in which such labor is employed;" moved by G. Bartley, seconded by T. Salmon, "That this Congress demand of the Dominion Government the passage of such legislation as will have the effect of preventing the further importation into Canada of Chinese labor, and of preventing the further admission, under any circumstances, of any of this class of emigrants." Moved by W. Darlington (Montreal), seconded by R. Keys (Montreal), "That this Congress is of opinion that the people of Canada at present are capable of sending a man amongst themselves to perform the functions of the Governor-General of Canada. Therefore, be it resolved that we demand on behalf of the people of this country to hereafter elect our own Governor instead of having one appointed by the British Government."

FROM THE CAPITAL.

Ministers Recreating From Their Arduous Labors.

OTTAWA, Sept. 8.—Mr. Dewdney, accompanied by Mrs. Dewdney, left this morning for New York and will sail for Europe by one of the German Lloyd steamships for Southampton. Before going to London they will visit friends in other parts of England. With Dewdney leaving Bowell and Langevin in the northwest, Colby in England and other ministers absent from the city, there is no appearance of general election, or parliament meeting for some time yet.

Not Credited.

A report has been going the rounds that the J. H. Hustede, which is now over 300 days out from this port for Liverpool, had arrived at the latter place dismasted. No clue can be obtained as to where the report originated, but no credence is given to it by marine men, who are unanimous in the opinion that she is lost.

Truth Will Stand.

During a late voyage of a coast vessel, the mate, who usually kept log, became intoxicated one day and was unable to do his duty. As the man very rarely committeed the offence the captain excused him and attended to the log himself, concluding with this:

"The next mate had been drunk all day."

Next day the mate was on deck and resumed his duties. Looking at the log he discovered the entry the captain had made and ventured to remonstrate with his superior.

"What was the need, sir?" he asked, "of putting that down on the log?"

"Wasn't it true?" asked the captain.

"Yes, sir; but it doesn't seem necessary to enter it on the log."

"Well," said the captain, "since it was true, it had better stand; it had better stand."

The next day the captain had occasion to look at the log, and at the end of the entry which the mate had made was found this item:

"The captain has been sober all day."

The captain summoned the mate and thundered: "What did you mean by putting down that entry? Am I not sober every day?"

"Yes, sir; but wasn't it true?"

"Why, of course it was true!"

"Well, then, sir," said the mate, "since it was true, I think it had better stand; it had better stand."

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.

Only the Most Thorough Education Can Secure It.

The Business of Keeping House Analyzed and Its Purpose Defined. Its Principal Object Is to Keep the Household Well and Happy.

Some people consider a woman a good housekeeper if her rooms are always in order and no dust is allowed to settle [illegible] good housekeeper because she has a knack for cooking, and her table is bountifully supplied with well chosen and well prepared food. A third depends for her reputation as a housekeeper upon her faithful and expert darning; she cuts the sheets in two when they become worn in the middle, she makes napkins of her half-worn table cloths, she keeps her children neatly clad and is always immersed in sewing, says a writer in Harper's Bazar. It is seldom that any woman excels in these three departments—as seldom as any one is to be found who is at the same time rich, handsome and clever; and even if a housekeeper existed who combined great neatness, facility in cooking and deftness with the needle, she might still fail of being a good housekeeper. This can be readily seen when the business of housekeeping is analyzed and its purpose defined.

In the first place, what is the object of housekeeping? Is it solely to keep a house clean? Heaven forbid! Is it to provide well cooked meals? Any properly conducted restaurant can do that. Is it to send forth its members fashionably attired? A seamstress would accomplish that better than nine-tenths of the mothers.

The object of housekeeping is no one of these, but all of them, and a great deal more. It is to keep the household, first, well, and second, happy. These two objects are really one, for no household can be happy which is chronically unhealthy; but since this fact does not seem to be clearly understood, it is, perhaps, well to separate the statement into two component parts.

It is necessary, in order that a family should be well, that the walls of its house, its floors, its windows, its beds, the clothes and bodies of its members should be kept scrupulously clean. Yet, by becoming a monomaniac upon the subject of cleanliess, the main purpose of the housekeeper is frustrated. The happiness of a family is ruined if things in the house can not be used for fear of smirching them, if the heedless, childish feet are to be followed everywhere by the dust brush and pan, and if continual scoldings are to be delivered for the breaking of rules.

No household is healthy where the food provided is not wholesome. A family to which rich viands are often served can not be well. Plain, savory steaks and roasts, oysters and clams in their season, carefully cooked cereals and vegetables, fresh milk and eggs, light, thoroughly baked bread, and plenty of ripe fruit—these are the only suitable articles for regular daily living. Warm breads, cakes, pies, pickles, fried food, puddings and confections and strong tea and coffee can be enjoyed by most people, sometimes with impunity, but in families where they are frequently served it will be found that there is also frequent illness—children out of school for two or three days at a time and the elders periodically laid up with sick headaches or attacks of neuralgia. "My stomach has nothing to do with my illness," they say. "Oh! no, it is my nerves," as though nerves were not dependent alas! upon digestion, good or the reverse.

Then there are the careful adjustments of clothing to the temperature, the ventilation of sleeping rooms and the regulation of sleeping hours, the management of baths, and a dozen other considerations which the good housekeeper must supervise.

Thus it goes. She who would keep her household in good condition must be constantly intelligent and on the alert, balancing this duty against that, deciding upon the most important, and doing it, no matter what difficulties fence her about.

The woman who constantly changes servants is a poor housekeeper, for she makes her family uneasy and uncomfortable. The woman is a poor housekeeper whose family is delicate and often ill (unless there be some radical difficulty in their location or in inherited tendencies, and even these can be largely overcome). The woman who is habitually in debt (unless there is great poverty, or avarice on the part of the other head of the family) as a poor housekeeper. It may seem almost wicked to add, though it is implied in almost every line of this little screed, that the woman who is often ill herself is a poor housekeeper. She may occasionally have to claim her right to rest, and she should not take it to heart if some notable neighbor accuses her of being lazy and self-indulgent. Her first duty to her family is to keep herself well, and unless biting poverty or organic disease prevent, she can by strength of mind and discreet management accomplish this object.

It may be remarked, in conclusion, that only the broadest and most thorough education can produce good housekeepers, and that up to this time they are appallingly rare.

Hot Water to Relieve Thirst.

It is a mistake to suppose that cold drinks are necessary to relieve thirst. Very cold drinks, as a rule, increase the feverish condition of the mouth and stomach, and so create thirst. Experience shows it to be a fact that hot drinks relieve the thirst and "cool off" the body when it is in an abnormally heated condition better than ice-cold drinks. It is far better and safer to avoid the free use of drinks below sixty degrees; in fact a higher temperature is to be preferred; and those who are much troubled with thirst would do well to try the advantages to be derived from hot drinks, instead of cold fluids to which they have been accustomed. Hot drinks also have the advantage of aiding digestion, instead of causing debility of the stomach and bowels.

PERSONAL MENTION.

A PHOTOGRAPHER paid Stanley $1,000 to sit for a portrait.

MISS TENNANT, who recently became Mrs. Stanley, is a descendant of Oliver Cromwell.

PRESIDENT DIAZ, of Mexico, looks the Indian he is. He is a man of medium height, stout, with a very dark face.

THE Prince of Wales has an income of $300,000 a year from the Duchy of Cornwall alone, and this is but one of several prolific sources from which he gets revenue.

GENERAL JAMES M. DENVER, after whom the city of Denver was named, is a law partner of ex-Attorney-General Garland. He is hale and hearty at the age of seventy years.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT, who is credited with having introduced the game of polo into this country, has traced its history back to the court of the Mikado, over a thousand years ago.

VON MOLTKE, who will be ninety years old next October, should he live till then, is said to use his voice with the clearness and gravity that characterized it a score of years ago.

SECOULD A. QUAL, a Norwegian, died recently in Eau Claire, Wis., leaving $1,000,000 for the establishment of a hospital at Madison for persons crippled and deformed from birth. He made his fortune in timber lands in Wisconsin.

IN acknowledging the honor conferred upon him by being taken into the ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic of Minneapolis recently, Archbishop Ireland said that among the dearest memories of his life were the recollections of the days when he acted as chaplain of the First Minnesota.

GENERAL NATHANIEL P. BANKS, whose name became conspicuous nearly forty years ago, when, on the one hundred-and-thirty-third ballot, and after a contest of two months, he was elected Speaker of the House of Representatives, is said to be the politest man in Washington. Though seventy-four years of age, he is still a good talker, full of interesting reminiscences, and his letters are models of elegant caligraphy.

UNTIL recently Chauncey Depew always had a queer habit of saying "By gosh" when excited. One day a friend upbraided him for using such profane language. "What," asked Our Chauncey, "You don't really mean to call 'By gosh' swearing?" "Why, of course, I do," replied his friend. "Well, then, by gosh, I will never say it again." And Depew has kept his word. He now swears "by jingo."

ALTON ANGLER, of Atlanta, the newly appointed consul to Rheims, is said to have gone through a snug fortune while a young man; and applied for a position in a railroad office. Being told that train hands only were needed he promptly accepted employment in that capacity, and performed every duty, no matter how humble, with a cheerfulness and care that resulted in a series of promotions that landed him in the position of general passenger agent of the Western & Atlantic railroad.

IF Dr. Parke, the plucky young surgeon who accompanied Stanley, is more impervious to beauty than his chief, not so is the fair sex in regard to him. When Stanley entered the forest of the pigmies a youthful female dwarf showed herself. She would have nothing to say to Stanley, but conceived a great affection for the doctor. She replied to his signs, insisted upon sleeping at his tent's door while the explorers were in the forest, and when they left she wanted him to go with her to her people.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE full edition of Marshal MacMahon's memoirs, six copies, has been distributed among his nearest relatives, with the injunction of secrecy.

A RUSSIAN-CHINESE dictionary has just been produced by the joint efforts of the Archimandrite Palladius and M. Papow, of the Russian legation at Pekin.

THE "Poems of Two Brothers" brought Charles and Alfred Tennyson just $100. The manuscript has been carefully preserved, and is estimated to be now worth $5,000.

JEAN INGELOW lives with her mother in Kensington, Eng. She is fifty-five. Her writing days are over and she devotes her time and considerable money to the parish poor.

MODERN poets enjoy longevity. Browning lived to be seventy-seven. Wordsworth, Bryant, Emerson and Longfellow were old men. Whittier, Tennyson and Walt Whitman still live.

"M. QUAD," the humorist and sketch artist of the Detroit Free Press, is paid $125 a week for his work. He weighs one hundred and twenty pounds, is very eccentric and is a perfect child in all business matters.

OSMAN PASHA, Grand Marshal of the Turkish army, whose heroism at Plevna was one of the grandest incidents of the Russo-Turkish war, has written a French poem for the journal published in New York by Tello d'Apery, a twelve-year-old boy.

BELLAMY is accused of taking his book, "Looking Backward," from an old German author named Bebel, who wrote a novel on the same lines, entitled "Women, Present and Future." Bellamy meets the charge with the statement that he can not read German and never heard of Bebel.

THE adventures of Stanley have not only been dramatized and played upon the stage, but a German author has already produced an epic poem, which in print covers 698 large octavo pages. The title is Congo Journeys. It has appeared anonymously in Dresden, issued by the the house of E. Pierson.

OF the original edition of the sonnets of Shakespeare, published by George Daniel, of London, in 1609, there are but two perfect copies known. One of these is in the British Museum; for the other $5,000 was paid but a short time ago. As the book is very small, only 7 by 4 inches, and weighing less than ten ounces, it was figured at that rate each ounce of the precious volume brought $500, or many times its own weight in gold.

Sensible Countess Tolstoi.

If Count Tolistol is a crank this cannot be said of his wife. Not long ago he insisted that his property should be distributed among the poor, and that his own family, which includes nine children, should be reduced to the position of beggars. His good wife interposed and succeeded in gaining control of his property and preventing him from wasting it in carrying out his notions. Her position was not unlike that of the late Mrs. Alcott, when her husband, "the Sage of Concord," 50 years ago or less, went to Fruitlands to establish a paradise, and finally reached Boston, where he was carried out. Mrs. Alcott seconded his efforts all the more readily because literally there was nothing to be eaten in the house. When his family had joined him in the efforts to live without eating it brought the philosopher to his senses. He could starve himself, but he could not see his children starving, too. He resigned the headship of the family to Mrs. Alcott, just as Count Tolstoi evidently gave up the management of his property to the countess. In both cases the woman saved the man.

STRANGE DREAMS.

VISIONS NEVER SATISFACTORI-

Strange Stories of Dreams That Have Been Verified by Believers—A Printer's Awful Nightmare—An Incident in the Life of Carlyle's Wife.

There are two matters in respect to which I am sure I shall never be able to cease from dreaming while I live, writing on the subject of dreams, says Horatio King in the New England Magazine. The one which most disturbes me is that of printing; and now, for over half a century since I quit that business, I may say without exaggeration that hardly a month has passed in which I have not dreamed about it. It usually occurs when I am over fatigued, or when from other cause I am not feeling well. I should premise that during about eight years of my boyhood, having commenced business before I was 19, I was the publisher and for six years of that time editor of a weekly newspaper. My labor the largest part of the time was not only severe, but I encountered violent opposition from a section of my own political party, which sought by most unfair means to crush me. In spite of all this my paper was regularly issued, never once failing to appear on the promised day of publication. Now, what is also singular about this dream is that, although not always the same in its details, is invariably attended with more or less of trouble and failure. Oftener than otherwise my editorials are not ready in time; I am behind in getting the type set; in making up the forms they are thrown into pi, or there is some other vexatious thing that comes to disturb me, and I do not remember to have succeeded more than once or twice in getting my paper off. Generally I am so much harassed that I awake, glad to find it "all a dream."

The other matter relates to my life in the postoffice department. These dreams are generally not quite so unpleasant; but they have likewise pursued me at frequent intervals ever since, and in fact before I left that department. They usually take shape in the fear that when absent on leave I had overstayed my time, or that in some other way I might have fallen short of my official duty.

Carlyle relates that when "a very little thing," anxious to learn, Jane Welch, who afterward became his wife, would sit up half the night over her lessons. One day she had been greatly perplexed by a problem in Euclid, which she did not solve. At last she went to bed, and in a dream got up and did it, and went to bed again. In the meantime she had no consciousness of her dream, but on looking at her slate there was the problem solved.

It is a well attested fact that our dreams are sometimes caused by our sensations. It is related of an English soldier that, so susceptible was he to audible impressions while asleep, his friends could make him dream what they pleased. They amused themselves by leading him into his dreams to some frightful difficulty and watching his efforts to extricate himself—sometimes inducing him to believe that a shark was in close pursuit of him; at others that he was suspended by only a thread from the projecting cliffs of a terrible precipice, and again that he had given offense to some person and must fight a duel. Thus on one occasion they called him to go through the whole process of a duel from the preliminary arrangements to the firing of a pistol, which they put into his hands and the report of which awoke him.

A well-authenticated and very remarkable instance of the fulfillment of a dream took place at Kennebunk, Me., in 1842. A new staunch bark, called the Isadore, was ready with a select crew to sail for New Orleans, when one of the crew went to the captain and asked to be released. On being pressed for his reason he said he had dreamed that the bark was driven ashore on Baldhead cliff, and every man on board perished. His friends tried to laugh him out of it but it was impossible for him to dispell the terrible vision from his mind. He had enlisted, however, and the captain insisted on his keeping his engagement. The night before the vessel was to sail he dreamed the same dream again, and, keeping out of the way, the captain was obliged to sail without him. Within 24 hours, the first night after she put to sea, the good bark Isadore encountered a terrible gale and blinding snow storm. She was driven upon the dangerous cliff, became a total wreck and every soul on board was lost.

Closely allied to simple dreamland is the still more mysterious state of somnambulism. In the one case it is usually thought without action, while in the other it is giving action to thought. Somnambulism, I imagine, is very uncommon. Many remarkable instances are recorded. One is that of a man on the coast of Ireland, who left his house one night at 12 o'clock, walked over a difficult and dangerous road a distance of two miles, and was discovered two hours afterward disporting hir self in the water 100 yards from shore. On going to him with a boat he was found to be asleep, and was with difficulty persuaded that he was not in bed.

An instance equally singular was that of a sailor—one of the crew of the Sea Breeze, at anchor in the harbor of New Gloucester, Mass., on the night of July 15, 1881. He arose from his berth in a state of somnambulism, went aboard of another schooner lying alongside, and leaped into the dock. The splash was heard by parties in the vicinity and he was rescued in an exhausted condition and replaced in his berth. When he awoke next morning he had no recollection whatever of his involuntary bath and narrow escape from drowning.

Of the many accounts I have collected, I will give only one more. For this Congressman Nelson Dingley, of Maine, is my chief authority. On a certain night in 1879 a fire occurred in his neighboring town of Fort Turner, when Mrs. Albert Winship aroused Mr. Winship and said:

"Husband, Mr. Starbird's house is all on fire. Hurry up!"

He dressed himself quickly, and with [illegible] service in saving some of the buildings. Returning home, he went quickly to bed. The next morning he complained of feeling lame and much exhausted.

"Well you may," said his wife, "after working so hard at the fire last night."

"What do you mean?" he inquired.

"Why you worked like a hero, saving the buildings round the Starbird house."

He looked dazed for an instant, then took his hat, looked over the premises and came back.

"Well, Marcia, the buildings are surely gone, but I never would have believed even you in saying I went to a fire last night had they not been destroyed. I don't know a thing about it."

He had been through all the excitement in a state of somnambulism without being awakened.

In order to test the correctness of this story I wrote to the postmaster of North Turner, who answered me that it was substantially correct, that he was with Winship at the fire, and that the latter told him the next morning that he could recollect nothing of the previous night.

I will conclude with the relation of two cases of trance, or suspension of animation, now published for the first time. In the first we have the experience of one of my own relatives, a devoted Christian, who died many years ago. I received the account from her own lips. On a certain occasion she was seriously indisposed, and being obliged to submit to a surgical operation, she instantly swooned and was to all appearance in the embrace of death. Her friends present thought her dead, but after a short time she revived and lived many years afterward. When she swooned it appeared to her that she was suddenly transported to the margin of a serene lake, environed by the most beautiful scenery. Approaching her in the water she saw in a boat two persons clothed entirely in white. She was given to understand that they were coming to receive her, and was about resigning herself to their care when, on reviving under the means used for her restoration she opened her eyes upon earth again, to the joy of the anxious friends around her. She was not at all credulous, but a woman of excellent common sense; yet from this time to the day of her death she believed that when the final summons came she would be received by the white-robed boatmen.

The other somewhat similar instance comes to me from an intelligent and reliable gentleman of my acquaintance, who received his information from the person who was the subject of the trance described. A respectable old gentleman in one of the Eastern states had long been living a widower, and he was so sorrowful at the loss of nearly all of his old friends that he himself was more nearly allied to the world of spirits than to this. Suddenly, one morning as he was looking out of the window of his bedroom, things began to present a strange appearance, and he threw himself upon his bed, where, at the hour of breakfast, he was found in a state of insensibility. It was about four hours before medical aid could be procured, and just before the physicians arrived he awoke to life, and soon regained his usual health. He also believed that while in this trance he visited the world of spirits, on his entrance into which he said he met his wife in all her virgin loveliness, in company with others he had known here. Spread out before him was a landscape enchantingly beautiful; he had passed safely through the dark valley of death and was filled with inexpressible joy and thanksgiving. He walked and conversed with his celestial associates, who told him he would return to the lower world, but would ere long rejoin them in happiness eternal. The thought of returning to the natural world was painful to him, for he wished never more to leave them. But in a moment the separation took place, and he again found himself in the tenement of mortality. He fully believed that on his final entrance to the silent land his reception would be only a repetition of that already so vividly impressed upon his mind.—St. Louis Republican.

Pure Lime Fruit Juice.

What is lime juice? This question is rendered necessary by the prominent attention Lime Juice is attracting as the best temperance beverage. The answer is that it should be the juice of the lime fruit without admixture.

By the "MONTSERRAT" Company alone is the lime fruit cultivated for this purpose, and great care should be taken to obtain this brand (as supplied to the British Government), in lieu of the numerous concoctions sold under the name of Lime Juice Cordials, Prepared Lime Juice, etc.

Sold by all druggists, grocers and at the leading hotels.

THE TIMES P. & P. COMPANY,

WM. TEMPLEMAN Manager.

NEITHER FISH, FLESH NOR GOOD RED HERRING.

The Kootenay Star, a weakly offspring of the Inland Sentinel published at Revelstoke, adverting to the policy of the TIMES, remarks with owl like gravity that, "whenever any new paper is started in the interior, the TIMES, hoping that a chance is opened for getting a recruit, begins at once to patronize and pat it on the back." The TIMES has never "patted" the Star "on the back." It has never wanted "recruits" bad enough for that. Indeed for political purposes the TIMES has always thought that it is better that sheets of the stamp of the Star should be what are known as Government organs. Without the ability to press Government claims for public confidence, nor yet possessed of the acumen to successfully defend the barnacles who barely escaped being scraped off the ship of state last June, such sheets as the Star are dead weights; the people attach to their dictum no more value than they do to the utterances of other varieties of flunkeyism. Admitting for the sake of argument that the TIMES is a monumental liar, we would point out that the Star is afraid to tell the truth, and between the sheet that lies and the one which suppresses the truth which is the most culpable? The out and out liar soon becomes known, and is rated accordingly. The moral coward, the one who suppresses truth for the sake of expediency and yet poses as an exemplar of virtue, is not only a liar but a hypocrite, contemptible and dangerous. In the case of the former the public is forewarned, which is to be forearmed, in the case of the latter, however, the public is all at sea, is liable to be made instruments for the basest purposes. It is impossible to tell when organs of expediency, craft and hypocrisy, will cut a throat. They work in secret. We repeat organs of this description are a dead weight to the Government.

INDIVIDUALISM.

BELLAMY has been ridiculed and HENRY GEORGE has been sat upon, the contention of their critics having been, in the main, that the principles set forth in "Looking Backward" and in "Progress and Poverty" were destructive of individualism. Granting such to be the case, although it need not be done, for individualism is indestructible and asserts itself under all circumstances and conditions, what about that lack of self-assertiveness, that want of mental vim in people which render them incapable of cutting swaths of their own? People of this sort represent the commonplace, at least for the sake of brevity we shall make use of the term in this sense, and we repeat, what about it? Are we not bound to ask ourselves, whether or no in the development of individualism it is too often the case that it is done at the expense of the commonplace? On this the whole question of the righteousness of existing institutions turns.

Individualism is all right, is essential to progress; but is there not such a thing as its going too far, in other words, is that individualism beneficent which has been acquired at the expense of the multitude? A most casual retrospect must convince a person that individualism has been abused. How about the individualism of CÆSAR, of NAPOLEON, and finally that of JAY GOULD and others of the same ilk? Is not such individualism rather high-priced? Has not the commonplace suffered in consequence of it? The United States contains 65,000,000 of people. The bulk of the wealth of that country, however, is held by 40,000 persons. This is individualism with a vengence. Assuming wealth to be the criterion of individualism, the discrepancy is something tremendous. Shall we assume that the accumulation of all this wealth by 40,000 persons has been attended with beneficent consequences to the remaining 64,998,375? He would be a rash man who would assert as much. But, if the tendency of things was to add numerically to individualism the prospect would not be so gloomy. The tendency, however, runs in an opposite direction. Individualism tends to centralization. At the rate things are going we may reasonably infer that the wealth of the United States a hundred years hence will be in the hands of 20,000 persons. So much for individualism. But what of the remedy? Is a remedy needed, and if so have we a specific in "Nationalism" as set forth by BELLAMY, or in "single tax" as enunciated by HENRY GEORGE? As to these remedies no man can afford to hazard an opinion who has the slightest inkling of the laws which govern mankind, but the person must be very peculiarly constituted who does not discover in unrestricted individualism a menace to free institutions, the slavery of the commonplace to the favored few, who whether through the exercise of individualism or adventitious causes have grasped the wealth of the country.

Deprecate as much as we may any movement calculated to stifle individualism, and urge as vehemently as we will the inexorable law of the survival of the fittest, the line has got to be drawn somewhere. Some method must be devised whereby misdirected individualism may be either nipped short off or diverted into beneficent channels. And this is really what we want, the diversion of individualism into channels as beneficent in respect to society as to the individualized person himself. It is not the stifling of individualism that is required, and indeed, we question whether conditions are possible which would compass this end. The desideratum is the discovery of that point beyond which the individualism of self may not go except at the ruinous expense of the multitude of the people who exemplify the common place, but who have rights in common with men favored with the highest mental attributes. Nor is an elaborate code of laws necessary to this consumation, nor is any essential change in our institutions required. A casual study of the 12th chapter of ST. LUKE should bring men to their senses. And, by the way, since this is a Christian generation, how does it come about that the philosophy of this chapter is so profoundly disregarded?

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE, ETC.

SIDNEY WEBSTER, a prominent lawyer, suggests as a method of settling the Behring sea question that a new seizure be made of a Canadian sealer caught red-handed outside the three mile zone and all on board carried in for adjudication at Sitka. "Let Canada employ all the resources of her bar and resist condemnation. Let Canada produce witnesses to prove her contentions about seal life, and let the United States produce their witnesses in rebuttal; let every relevant fact in the dispute be fought over in open court, and the whole record carried by appeal to the Supreme Court at Washington and there argued."

All this is very fine, but why not seize an American sealer caught red-handed outside the three mile zone? Several seizures of this kind already have been made, and the wonder is that the owners of the seized schooners have not appealed to the courts. It is the expense of the thing, we presume, which has prevented them from doing so. The game was not worth the candle. Nevertheless we should suppose that a test case as proposed by Mr. WEBSTER might well be made, although for the purpose intended there is no occasion to make fresh seizures. The Canadians already have a case. Why not the Government furnish the means that the owners of seized schooners might prosecute their claims in the Supreme Court of the United States?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Tory journals deny that Sir JOHN MACDONALD intends to advise the Governor-General to dissolve Parliament before the census is taken. The force of the denial is somewhat weakened by the fact that the same journals are strenuously arguing that if the Governor-General should receive such advice he must necessarily act upon it, which is not the case.

An interesting return regarding the national debt of Great Britain appears in the English papers of the 18th inst. At the commencement of the year 1836 the aggregate net liabilities were returned at £845,480,000, which had been reduced to £783,797,000 by 1869, and to £684,954,000 last year. During the same period the funded debt has fallen from £760,294,000 to £585,959,000 in 1889. This is not bad for the effete old country that is being ruined by free trade. The British investments in foreign loans and foreign enterprises of all kinds are now estimated to amount to £2,800,000,000 sterling, say fourteen thousand million dollars.

There is a probability of the Panama canal scheme being revived. In best informed circles, in fact, the matter is regarded practically concluded. As the dispatches indicate the arrangement is as follows: The extension of the contract for eight years longer, works to be commenced not later than one year and a half after their approval. The Government will concede 10,000 hectares of land that may be necessary for carrying out the scheme and settle the expenses. The company will pay the Columbian Government 12,000,000 francs in eight annual instalments of 1,500,000 francs each, and 5,000,000 francs worth of free privildged shares. The company will also contribute 80,000 francs monthly for military protection, and all freight of Columbian produce passing over the Panama railroad to be carried at half tariff rates.

Mr. SCOTT, of the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, and the builder of the cruiser San Francisco, recently launched, has decided to donate $100,000 of the $142,000 earned in the shape of premium [illegible] payment for excess of speed over contract requirements to his workmen. The San Francisco Examiner anent the subject says: "It is fitting that the fidelity of the men shall be recognized. It is good policy, too, for it means the best possible work in the future. Of course the present action will not be taken to mean that all the premiums to be earned hereafter will be divided among the men, but it will be an assurance of generous consideration. It will show that at the Union Iron Works the relations between employers and employed are not regulated entirely by the Civil Code."

RE COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS TAX.

TO THE EDITOR.—To show you how this absurd and obsolete restriction on business is effecting the retail merchants of Victoria, I may say that I have been waiting for some time for the representative of a Montreal wholesale house to call on me, as I am in want of goods which I cannot get here, and I have just heard from Vancouver that he is going back from there, as he will not risk having to pay the $50 tax, as that added to necessary travelling expenses, would amount to over $100 and the business to be done here would not afford such an outlay. A RETAIL MERCHANT.

THE MURDER OUT.

TO THE EDITOR:—I observe that your Ottawa letter in the weekly of the 22nd August, over the familiar signature of Slabtown, is devoted mainly to a discussion of the Mormon question, and I must acknowledge that the facts of the case are there stated with great fairness. The commentary also shows greater impartiality than is usually exhibited by the Canadian press, when dealing with unpopular minorities. There is also some plausibility in the closing inference, that "the little Mormon colony will yet prove to be of considerable annoyance to the state."

I desire now very briefly to call attention to the head and front of the Mormons' offending, as elicited in the course of a recent agitation which newspapers have described, with unconscious irony, as the "first gun." Sir, the gun was indeed of somewhat primitive pattern, if not the "first" of its kind, and was at least fresh from the M-cl-d museum to which it had been donated in early days by a pawky Scot. Its discharge was awaited with some anxiety by peaceable people who knew and respected its antiquity. The bursting of the weapon was not their only apprehension; they dreaded the possibilities of wild practice on the part of the gunners, whom they also knew, and that was what finally occurred. In so far as the firing on that occasion might be honestly directed against a hated ogre called Polygamy, it seems to have been applauded by the press and the country. It is true that Mr. Polygamy, if he ever existed, had been completely annihilated some months previously by a corps of Ottawa engineers; but his phantom remained, and much respectability and even glory were to be gained by firing at him.

Now, behind this phantom or spectral illusion, on a rising eminence, there stood a noble pile of solid masonry. The order of the architecture, if not distinctively Canadian, was yet such as is dear to Canadians in every part of the Dominion. It was a Temple of Industry. Near it, with only the phantom between, were other piles of a similar order, each the rival of all the others in a bid for patronage. Viewing the scene from a safe distance by the aid of a field-glass (for I was in mortal fear of the gun), I could perceive the effect of the first shot. I could also distinguish the faces of the artillerymen, and in these I was astonished to recognize the combined presidency of all the temples on that side the phantom. For once in their history these arch-enemies to mutual co-operation were found co-operating. But I was soon lost in contemplation of the extraordinary pranks played by those gunners after the first shot. The range, though in good line, had proved a little too high. The missile had just grazed the head of the phantom, and made a deep dent in the building beyond, close to the basement. Colonel Hoyle, M. P., the honorary commandant, looked extremely uncomfortable, and shook his head in earnest expostulation with the officer in actual command, who somehow was raising the piece instead of lowering it. The result seemed to be a compromise, for the firing continued at the same range. I gazed and wondered. And now the expression of intense disgust, which had been gathering in the face of the honorary colonel, began to affect the spectators who had turned out from all parts to witness the demonstration. All stood aghast at the work of wanton destruction. Among the spectators were gentlemen of the press, united in their detestation of the phantom and its original, yet abashed at the simulated virtue of a lurking jealousy that only aimed at the removal of an industrial competition. It was clear enough that this accidental shooting was pre-arranged. Such at any rate was the idea that afterwards appeared between the lines in the newspaper press

And what was all this trouble about? Are the Mormons injuring the trade of Canada? On the contrary, they are enlarging its volume. All they buy is procured in Canada, retailed in Canada, and consumed or utilized in Canada? The Cardston store, the present bone of contention, is supplied by merchants in Canada, though unfortunately not by merchants in the locality of the "first gun." Should the Mormons of Cardston engage in manufactures, the raw material must be obtained in Canada. The customs tariff will ensure this, not to mention other considerations. Is not the anti-Mormon agitation, in its recent phase, a most humiliating confession of incapacity on the part of the agitators? Our American cousins have never so stultified themselves. Americans fear not Mormon or any competitors. Americans are thieves, and covet the Church's property—that is all. I remain, etc.,

A PREVAILING VICE.

Some of the Dangers of Self-Doctoring in Epidemics.

Self-doctoring is always dangerous, except for the simplest ailments. Few persons understand the significance of their symptoms; the difficulty of doing so is greatly increased by the complex nature of most diseases, and the modification of treatment demanded by individual temperament and hereditary tendencies. Even if the patient knows what ails him, he is not likely to know the remedy, the size and frequency of the dose, and the proper regulation of the diet in connection with it.

How profound is the general ignorance upon this subject is shown by the enormous consumption of quack medicines. Multitudes of people try one nostrum after another in utter blindness. If all such compounds were thrown into the sea, it would save every year millions of dollars and thousands of lives.

During the prevalence of a widespread epidemic, self-doctoring becomes peculiarly perilous. Fear is in the air, and is more contagious than small-pox itself. Under its influence men fly to drugs, either to ward off the dreaded attack, or to cure a disease which very likely exists only in the patient's excited imagination. The impaired condition of the system under this ill-advised dosing invites the very attack which the dosing was intended to avert.

The newspapers announce that a particular drug is being employed by distinguished physicians; it is extensively advertised, and a credulous public makes haste to procure it. In many such cases the drug in question is merely being experimented with cautiously by the physicians, and likely enough, when they come to compare notes with each other afterward, it is discarded altogether. It may meet one symptom of the disease, but on the whole prove to be attended with great danger.

Again, in most epidemics, there are various types of the prevailing disease. This was eminently true of the late influenza. In many cases the special seat of it was the lungs and air passage; in others, the brain; in a third class, the digestive tract. Of course the remedy needed to be adapted to the particular type. Further, it needed to be adapted to the stage of the disease. A prescription appropriate to the fever stage might be very harmful in the later stage of marked depression.

But the people took no cognizance of these fundamental facts. One of the drugs most in use was quinine—an effective remedy in its place, but a perilous one out of its place. Though its first effect is to stimulate, its later effect is greatly to depress. Nothing could be more hazardous than to administer it in the later stage of so depressing a disease as influenza. A writer in the Medical Advance believes that nearly all the more dangerous symptoms in this epidemic were due to the indiscriminate use of quinine.

SMUGGLERS OUT-JOBBED.

A Heavy Opium Prize Snatched from their Grasp.

The Examiner says: The opium that Officer Conboy captured in Chinatown Sunday morning was not the only consignment of the unstamped drug imported by the coal steamer Jeanie.

There was another one, a heavy one, too, and it, like that in the Commercial street hack, came to grief for its sub rosa importers, but in a different manner.

A wild set of restaurateurs, whose chop-house is on Brannan street, near the Mail dock, are caring little for legitimate business just now.

They wot not of profit on coffee and doughnuts and ham and eggs, and only long to insert the head cook's longest, sharpest knife between the ribs of the late night cook of the institution, a sharp youth of some nineteen years, commonly known as "Johnnie."

Johnnie disappeared last Wednesday morning, and with him $1,600 worth of fine Victoria milled opium which never saw a revenue stamp and which did not belong to him.

The outside man of the restaurant firm works around the Mail dock on the lookout for opportunities. He is an Italian.

His partner, who is a Greek, looks out for the restaurant business and aids and abets the other in taking advantage of the opportunities that the latter discovers.

Johnnie has been employed as sole engineer of the restaurant from dark till daylight.

The four-masted steam schooner Jeanie is in the coal trade between Puget Sound and this port. Port Townsend is not far from Victoria, where the opium mills grind out their high-priced grist. She docks at the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's wharf, which is not over a stone's throw from the restaurant.

Such are the dramatis personæ and scenes in the comedy.

HID IN THE BACKYARD.

The out side man discovered an opportunity soon after the Jeanie commenced discharging last week. It was in the shape of $1,600 worth of opium among the Jeanie's coal bags.

The opium would cost more if the duty were paid on it, and would not bring any higher price.

The opportunity consisted of getting the stuff ashore and saving the tax which manifesting it and running it through the custom house would cost.

A pool was formed and the illicit drug acquired.

The outside man attended to landing it and turned it over to the restaurant end of the firm. He sacked it up and stowed it away in the yard back of the restaurant with ostentatious carelessness.

His next work was to devise a plan of transporting it to market. The milk-wagon route was adopted and arrangements made with the driver of one of these vehicles to call for the opium at 4 o'clock last Wednesday morning.

"Johnnie," said the restaurant man to the night cook last Tuesday night, when Jonnie relieved him, "when the milkman comes in the morning give him that stuff in the sacks in the back yard. It is a lot of old groceries I have sold him."

The last remark settled the fate of the opium. Johnnie knew that his employers were not in the grocery business and he had an idea that they were in the opium trade.

JOHNNIE ROBS HIS EMPLOYERS.

Business was dull, and about midnight he explored the sacks and discovered the truth.

Johnnie made a hasty calculation that it would take five years and a half to earn $1600 with his frying pan and concluded to go into the opium business himself. He hustled around till he found a vehicle, and then resigned his cook's job at once. He put the restaurant in order, not forgetting to empty the till, locked the street door and was gone an hour before the confederate milkman put in an appearance.

It was a case they could not very well take into the courts or put into the hands of the detectives. This aggravated the injury. They finally resolved to offer a reward for the capture of Johnnie. The figure was fixed at $200, but the inducement is only held out to a very few.

The inside man was interviewed yesterday afternoon, but declined to say anything beyond anathematizing the runaway night cook as an ungrateful till tapper. The reward was a subject he did not care to speak of.

A WIDOW'S SOLICITUDE.

An Excellent Story Told by Barnum, the Great Show-Man.

"I saw a strange sight once going to show the strength of a woman's grief for her dead husband," said Mr. Barnum in one of his afternoon chats to a Chicago Tribune reporter.

"The man had been an invalid so long that he was helpless. He lived in the mountains of Vermont. His wife went with him everywhere, and, as the atmosphere in that region was always moist, the wife insisted that her invalid husband should never go out without his top coat and a pair of buck mitts on his hands. No matter where those people were seen the man was attired for cold weather.

"He died. I attended the funeral. A lady who was present called my attention to something under the shirt-front of the corpse. A closer investigation showed that the object was the top coat which the poor fellow had worn so much in his life-time. The lady asked the widow why she had put the coat there and her reply was that he hadn't gone anywhere without it for years and she couldn't think of his not having it. The casket was placed in a receiving vault. When it arrived there it was again opened for a last look. The widow was seen to linger about the body for several minutes, engaged in something, no one could see what. Then the casket was closed and placed in the receptacle. As we were being driven home the widow remarked to her lady friend to whom she had spoken about the coat: 'I feel better now, for I got his mitts in the coffin before it was closed. He had worn them so much that I couldn't think of his being without them.'

"The poor woman was so sincere about all this that it was some years before I could get my consent to think that the sad situation had a humorous phase."

Health and Exercise.

The fact that wrong is in many cases a mere expression of excess in what was right finds numerous illustrations. Most vices, indeed, can on this ground claim a highly respectable ancestry. The value of exertion, again, in its various forms (whether associated with work or play) has doubtless ever been, as it still is, discounted by the same inherent risk. Thus it is that we find even so great a boon as physical exercise becomes in many minds, and not unreasonably, the subject of conflicting doubts. It has been overdone; the recreative mean has been passed and the resulting exhaustion can find no solace but in rest.

On the Same Day.

"I picked up a bit of information the other day," said a hotel clerk, "that I hadn't thought of before. A couple of men were talking in the office, when one asked on what day of the week Christmas will be this year. 'Let's see,' replied the other, 'I was married on the first day of May, that was Wednesday. Christmas will come on Wednesday.' That struck me forcibly, and when I got a little leisure I gathered up a lot of old calendars and investigated it. I found that it is true that the first day of May and Christmas of the same year occur on the same day of the week."

The Cause of Death.

People are laughing at a doctor in a little village in Pennsylvania who, in filling out a certificate of death, inadvertently wrote his own name in the blank space reserved for "cause of death."

BARRUNDIA'S DEATH

To be Investigated—A Precedent Bearing on the Case.

A dispatch from Washington announces that the State Department has taken measures to secure full particulars of the shooting of General Barrundia on board an American vessel lying in the port of San Jose by officers of the Guatemalan Government, and until the exact facts and circumstances connected with the affair are known, it does not care to express any opinion of the case or of the course of Minister Mizner. A case involving an identical principle occurred in Nicaragua in 1885, and in that case Secretary Bayard informed our Minister to Central America that Nicaragua had a right to take the man wanted from an American merchant vessel, provided she was in Nicaraguan waters. The case was that of Jose Gomez.

In a letter dated Guatemala, February 10, 1885, Minister Hall informed Secretary Frelinghuysen that he had been informed the Guatemalan Government proposed to take from on board the Pacific Mail steamer Honduras, then lying in San Juan del Sur, a passenger named Gomez, in transit for Panama, but wanted in Nicaragua to answer to a charge of being implicated in a recent insurrection. Minister Hall said he had directed our Consul at Nicaragua to inform the Nicaraguan Government that our Government has never consented and never will consent to the arrest and removal from an American vessel in a foreign port of any passenger in transit, much less if the offence is a political one. The captain of the vessel did not give up the man, and sailed out of port without securing proper clearance papers. He was tried and convicted for this by the Nicaraguan authorities.

The case came before the State Department in this way, and it held that Minister Hall had not acted according to law. In his letter to the Minister, which is dated March 12, 1885, Secretary Bayard says: "It appears that Gomez voluntarily took passage on the vessel, knowing it would enter en route a Nicaraguan port. It may safely be affirmed when a merchant vessel of one country visits the port of another for the purpose of trade it owes temporary allegiance and is amenable to the jurisdiction of that country, and is subject to the laws which govern the port it visits, so long as it remains, unless otherwise provided by treaty. Any exemption or immunity from legal jurisdiction must be derived from the consent of that country." It is said that cases have frequently occurred in which revolutionists and others wanted for offenses of one character or another have been seized by the Hawaiian Government while on British merchant ships, and Great Britain has not protested, thus establishing diplomatic precedents.

The Barrundia affair differs from the other in that the man was shot, but the right to seize being conceded, the right to kill if resistance is made is an old established principle of law, and the principal criticism made in diplomatic circles of Minister Mizner's course is that of unnecessary interference. It is suggested that he might have simply stated to the Guatemalans that they seized the man at their own risk. But the department waits for exact information as to what he did do.

Mining Notes and Matters of Interest Condensed from the Inland Press.

From the Kamloops Sentinel.]

Dr. Dawson, of the Geological Survey department, returned to town after a trip up the North Thompson river. He went between thirty and forty miles and eastward over the plateau at that point. The object of his visit was to secure information regarding that part of the country for the filling in of a map on which he is engaged. The doctor [illegible] where he will spend a week or so. This will complete his work in British Columbia for this season, and after a short stay in Kamloops, he will return to Ottawa.

A number of ladies in town are contemplating the organization of a society with the laudable object of aiding in more comportably furnishing the Royal Inland Hospital. It is proposed to establish a kind of mending bureau to which the bachelors of the town may send their articles of wearing apparel in need of repairs and have them made as good as new, or as near it as possible, for which charges will be made, on the principle "all things in moderation." The idea is a good one, and there is no doubt, if the ladies carry out their intention, great good will be done. The proceeds of this work go toward the hospital fund.

Prof. Ball, a mining expert recently from England, paid a visit to the Nicola mines this week in the interests of the mining company. He is of opinion that the Nicola Company have an excellent property, and that the money put in the development work has been very judiciously expended.

Rev. Father Guertin, of New Westminster, has been appointed to carry on the work of the Roman Catholic Church in the mountain districts in connection with the Kamloops mission.

Two sisters from the Church of England school at Yale were in town last week collecting subscriptions for the support of that institution. They were successful in raising a considerable amount of money.

A number of merchants of the town propose getting up a purse to be offered in prizes for periodical contests by the two companies representing the fire brigade of the town.

The work of making a wagon road of the trail from Campbell's Creek to join with the Nicola road at Newman's, is well advanced. Superintendent Stevenson was in town Friday and states that 18½ miles have been completed, leaving about half a mile of heavy work to be done. It will take about a fort night to finish the work.

Rev. J. W. Hall and Mr. E. Kert, delegates from Kamloops Lodge to the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Grand Templars, to be held at Nanaimo on the 9th and 10th inst., have left for the Black Diamond City.

The rainfall at Empire Valley during the past month, in fact throughout the summer, has been unprecedentedly heavy, and haying and harvesting operations have been greatly retarded.

Hay, grain and vegetable crops at Lillooet are better than they have ever been before, and the wild grass is on a par with the cultivated crops. The water melons grown there would delight the heart of a resident of Old Virginia.

A Lillooet man avers that the salmon running up the river were so thick the other day that he could walk across the river on their backs. Thousands of the daring fish struggle up the stream and thousands float down again to the sea, dead.

Mining operations are being carried on in the vicinity of Lillooet with fair results. A party has gone up Bridge river, but have not reported as to the result of their efforts. Quartz mining is apparently at a stand still. Capital is wanted to carry on the work.

The residence of Mr. John McLeod, of Cache Creek, was on Tuesday night burned to the ground. Nothing was saved and Mr. McLeod and his family barely escaped with their lives. The origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. Chas. Semlin, M.P.P., drove to Ashcroft on Wednesday and collected $400 from residents of that town and vicinity, which was given to Mr. McLeod to aid him in tiding over the loss he has sustained.

From the Kootenay Star.]

A lot of 87 railroad laborers, mostly Italians, were brought from Montreal and forwarded to Sproat on Thursday.

Steel rails are now going forward for the Shuswap and Okanagan railway. On Saturday last and the two following days, eighteen car loads passed Revelstoke billed from Montreal wharf to Sicamous.

Messrs. Jowett & Haig have taken up a mineral claim at Albert Canyon, but as it runs very low in silver, $1 per ton, and is first quality of lime stone, they are advertising for wood choppers and rock breakers and will begin lime burning at once.

The Swedish residents of Revelstoke hold religious services at the school house on each Wednesday evening.

A private letter from Hot Springs states: The wagon road is through to the Kraso, and chopped out to the United, and about $400 will finish it. It. Dr. Campbell's United is simply a bonanza. The Fourth was sold yesterday for $9000 cash, and the last week A. D. Wheeler bought the 244 for $1500. Anderson sold out south of Sky Line for $3000, and a small claim for $500.

The adherents of the English church in Revelstoke have made an informal organization by the appointment of a committe composed of Judge Tunstall, Mr. Lendrum and Mr. Haig; secretary, J. W. Vail; treasurer, F. B. Wells. The secretary and treasurer are ex-officio members of the committee.

The project of erecting a public hall in Revelstoke is getting into solid shape. Several meetings have been held, and it has been fully determined that the building shall be constructed. A joint stock company is to be formed, and it now only remains to perfect the formalities required by law in its organization.

The first frost of the season was to be seen this morning, severe enough to affect the growing vegetation.

The Hot Springs camp was thrown into a state of wild excitement last week by the discovery of wire silver on the Revelstoke Mining Co.'s claim, the United, of which samples were brought up to Dr. Campbell by Mr. Wilson. Extensions were staked immediately in all directions, and the man who got up early in the morning, thinking to be the first on the ground, found that some one had stolen a march on him in the night. This is the liveliest strike of the year, and stands to the credit of the prescient managers of the smelter company at Revelstoke.

James Brady, the well known mining engineer, arrived at Illecillewaet on Friday from Victoria to see how the contract on the Lanark is progressing. The tunnel is now in 350 feet, and after running 30 feet or so further a connection is to be made with the upper tunnel, which will be [illegible] feet. Mr. Brady expects to be through by January, 1891. He is putting more men on and has ordered six months' supplies from Green Brothers.

THE COAL MARKET.

A San Francisco Broker Thinks There Will be a Shortage.

J. W. Harrison, the San Francisco coal broker in his weekly circular issued on the 6th inst, says: "Arrivals during the week have been from northern mines 30,432 tons, from foreign sources 8,209 tons. There is no very marked change in high prices last week, but already advanced prices only limited amounts can be purchased by any single buyer. That the market is in a very precarious position can not be questioned. Its final situation can only be guessed if coast collieries don't materially increase their shipments, there will unquestionably be a marked shortage for our actual demands this winter.

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price 50c. for small or $1 for large size bottles by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont. daw

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

THE LACROSSE MATCH.

Vancouver vs. Victoria—Spirited Playing—Unsatisfactory Ending.

The match at Vancouver on Saturday afternoon was witnessed by the largest crowd ever assembled in the Province to see any game. The afternoon was all that could be desired, but the grounds were new and too soft to admit of good clean play. The ball was faced at 4:45, Dempster losing to Covil was passed to Nichols, but was recovered by McKenzie, who neatly passed to Cusack. After being jammed by two opponents, Cusack passed to Tite, who made a good throw on goal but H. Quigley secured the rubber and put it well on Victoria's goal, where some brilliant play was made by the Vancouver home, which was as well defended. An undershot from Nichols was well stopped by Wade, Cullen taking the rubber and relieved goal in good style, placing the rubber well down the field, when Vancouver had a number of close calls but the ball passed out of bounds. Here Draper was allowed to go to the goal when he should have faced with Blight, but Captain Lowe, not noticing the disadvantage, allowed Suckling to face instead, who neatly passed to Scurry who cleared well and landed the ball on Victoria's goal. In the scuffle Dempster received a heavy check, when time was called. Play was resumed and the ball was returned to centre when Cox lost to Rankin in the face off, who neatly threw on goal, but was secured by W. Cullen who made brilliant play. The rubber was taken from behind the flags and was so closely checked that he dare not throw, but passing the whole line of Vancouver's nimble home, carried it past centre where a scrimmage ensued, the rubber passing out of bounds. Victoria secured in the face and passed to Cox, who tipped to Sprinkling and a good shot on goal was stopped by Suckling who relieved Vancouver's goal. Here some smart play was done by D. Smith, but an attack was saved by Wade, who did not attempt much long throwing but did equally as good work in checking Dave Smith and preventing him from doing his usual quick work. C. Cullen took the ball but was surrounded; an attempt to throw failed, the ball dropping short, but it was snapped like lightning by Cusack and delivered to one side of Vancouver's goal, and after some good attempts by Blight and Sprinkling, C. Quigley made a fine throw on Victoria goal. Repeatedly the ball was thrown out by the defense, and a neat throw by Jerry Boultbee was stopped by W. Cullin. Knight tipped across to Rankin, who had the only clear open shot in the game, but threw wide, which is unusual for him. Vancouver fought hard to bring the rubber in front of goal but was well checked by W. Clark, C. Cullin and Wade. Cusack stood like a cat watching a mouse, picked the ball from the scuffle and delivered. J. Cox secured the rubber but received a bad check above the knee from Suckling, which prevented him from doing his work, and left the home field weak at that point. Repeatedly Blight ran out and secured the rubber from the field, carrying in and lobing on the flags, but that left Tite and Sprinkling to check four men. Suckling threw down and was taken by Jerry, who threw wide on goal. Cullin took the rubber and threw to centre; was well caught by Scurry, who held on too long in trying to pass Cox and Dempster. Blight ran out and relieved Scurry of the ball just as he had passed Dempster by a good dodge, and carried through the defence, making a staight shot, but Suckling caught well and threw down, but was instantly returned by Cusack. Sprinkling stopped a throw by Suckling, and H. Quigly neatly tipped to Scurry, he passing to Nichols, who attempted a throw on goal but a short stop was made by C. Cullin, Robt. Clark taking the rubber out of danger. The stubborn defence on both sides kept the ball flying from goal to goal. Dave Smith did some fine play, but a throw on goal was prevented by Wade. The ball picked out of crowd by W. Clark and landed well down the field. After a heavy encounter Cox took the ball, making a close shot on goal. Chub Quigly relieved to Rankin, who again shot wide. Cullin again took the ball and threw threw from goal to goal, and again the rubber began to travel from end to end, W. Clark and C. Cullin doing some neat picking and throwing, while Wade was determined that no throw on goal should be made. W. Cullin made a shorter throw than usual, which was taken by Jim Smith and passed to Nichols, who made a fine throw on the flags and was stopped by Wade, the ball falling at his feet and rolled back through the goal about three inches, owing to a heavy incline just where the flags had to be placed. The umpire's hands were raised exactly 60 minutes from the commencement of game.

SECOND GAME.

Play was resumed at 6:30 o'clock. Face lost to Vancouver, but was returned by W. Cullen. Here Victoria home made hot work for Vancouver's seemingly impregnable defence, but Suckling finally got away and delivered to one side of field to be thrown in by Jerry. Some good checking was done by W. Clark and Mackenzie, but Nichols secured the rubber and planted it on goal. But Cullen was there, and made a neat throw down, and caught by G. Tite, who was ever to be found in his position. After passing the Quigley brothers in elegant style, and making a circle for a clear shot on goal, he was checked from behink by Scurry, who carried the rubber down the field and shot on goal, but it was sent back by Cullen, and was well taken by Sprinkling, who made his usual lobe on goal. Tite in the meantime had spread out to receive a tip, which left Blight held down by Suckling, while H. Quigley rescued the flags by a beautiful throw on Victoria. After a scrimmage Cullen threw to centre field, where it got into the crowd. Victoria got the face and played the rubber to Vancouver's goal, but after some good passing by the Quigley brothers the goal was placed out of danger by Harry, who passed it to Scurry. Robt. Clark made a good stop from Scurry, and was neatly picked up by W. Clark, and now Victoria's staying powers began to be felt as they manœuvred the ball around Vancouvre's goal. It was finally dispatched by Suckling only to be instantly returned by McKenzie, who was beginning to recover from an ugly double check in the first game. After some good play on both sides, Scurry secured the ball to Nichols, who was too well checked to do any damage. Cusack got the ball away and on Vancouver's flags, where things began to look dangerous, but the ball got into the crowd at one side of the goal where a face off took place between Smith and C. Cullen. The instant that the referee called play, Nichols charged C. Cullen, making a determined foul, which resulted in his being knocked over. While recovering, Nichols repeated the foul and in saying himself Cullen threw his arm around Nichol's neck and held him close, so that no damage could be done. The Victoria captain claimed a foul, which was granted, and, to even matters, the referee ruled both men off, but after consultation the team concluded to withdraw from the field as Cullen did nothing to warrant a reprimand. So the game closed after 40 minutes play, in favor of Vancouver; one game to none, which Vancouver plainly saw would result otherwise. In the entire play, much facing off had to be resorted to on account of the narrowness of the grounds. No game was ever better umpired than by L. F. Macgurn, who stood like a stone when an attempt to scare a game out of him was made.

The sum of the play was as follows, concerning the teams: Vancouver played a magnificent home game, but was as well met by Victoria's defence. For quick play and neat throwing, Victoria excels. Suckling and Quigly are number one players, but Sprinkling, Blight and Tite can out play them if supported by the home field. Vancouver's home was better supported by the home field and great improvment is noticeable in the play of Covil, who will make a good man after learning to dispatch the ball quicker. Victoria's home field and center did not feed their home as they would have done had they not been both injured at the beginning of the game. If Victoria will assist the team in getting situations for good men, they can by one or two additions make a team that cannot be beaten in the Province, and although they lost in the fore part of the season, it is now admitted by both New Westminster and Vancouver that Victoria has no need to take second place if their team is fully represented. It is to be remembered that A. Kenning, their best rustler, and Ledingham, were unable to play, and that it would have resulted in a good score for Victoria had they been on.

AN INDEPENDENT.

Funeral.

The funeral of the late F. C. Marshall took place at 4:30 p. m., Sunday. At the Reformed Episcopal church, and also at the grave, Bishop Cridge read the services for the dead. The friends and relatives of the deceased were present at the burial.

Cannot be Surpassed

Mr. Jno. T. Pierre, merchant tailor, has received his first shipment of fall and winter goods, comprising elegant English and American coatings, suitings and trousering. On inspection they will be welcomed by lovers of choice cloth as they far surpass any previous importation of woolens into British Columbia, and as Mr. Pierre employs none but the best workmen, his customers may depend on having their garments cut and made in a satisfactory manner. *

The Letter Carriers.

A great many complaints are being heard in regard to the delivery of letters by the letter carriers, who it is said, do not bring the Sound mail around until the afternoon after its arrival, whereas it should be delivered in the morning. Of course the men cannot be expected to be perfect, as the wages that are paid them by the Dominion Government hardly pays for shoe leather. Another carrier, however, might be put on to help out the unfortunately slow individual who delivers between Yates and North Park streets. On Saturday evening, about 6 o'clock, he was seen sitting on the sidewalk on Pandora street sorting his mail, and it is a very frequent occurrence for him to call at the same house twice or thrice during one delivery.

At the Park.

An unusually warm day at the hill yesterday afternoon, without the pleasant breeze that is usually looked for by the visitor who goes there for rest on Sunday afternoon. The snow-capped mountains were hidden by the smoky haze prevalent at this season, and consequently the people had to be satisfied with listening to the music of C Battery Band, which, by the way, was something extra, and demands something more than a passing word of praise. Every tune was well rendered and in exact time, and even the unmusical individual was captivated.

The same large crowd of people were out airing themselves yesterday in spite of the heat and smoke.

A burning cigar or match or perhaps a mischevious boy succeeded in burning the grass and shrubbery off the side of the hill during the day.

The question asked on every side was: Where are the seal? They were both missing and no one seemed to know what had become of them. Some thought that perhaps the Rush, Bear or Corwin had been over to confiscate the seal taken on the Sound, and not knowing one from the other, had taken both.

The Queen Pays All Expenses.

The Queen's last "Free Trip to Europe" having excited such universal interest, the publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 extra for expenses, to the person sending the largest list of English words constructed from letters contained in the words "British North America." Additional prizes, consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Gold Watches, French Music Boxes, Portiere Curtains, Silk Dresses, Mantel Clocks, and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin Jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to the girl or boy (delivered free in Canada or United States), sending largest lists. Everyone sending a list of not less than twenty words will receive a present. Send four 3c. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample number of the Queen;

COMING WEST.

Sir Hector Langevin on His Way to Victoria—Other Visitors Coming.

A correspondent writing from Port Arthur, under date of the 1st inst., says: The following arrived here per Alberta, lake route, from Owen Sound, all bound for Victoria, British Columbia: Sir Hector Langevin, Minister of Public Works; Mr. Thomas Chapais, who edits Le Courrier du Canada, his father being at one time Minister of Agriculture in Sir John's Government; Mr. Chapais, the Minister, accompanied by his son, and Mr. Roy, private secretary to Sir Hector.

Sir Hector has been working so assiduously in his department that his health became affected, and his medical adviser insisted upon his taking a holiday. He had intended this summer to visit a number of places in Ontario where public works are being carried on, but the imperative order of his doctor has compelled him to seek rest and change of scene.

The following gentlemen, capitalists from England, who have interests at Vancouver, are also en route by the same train; Mr. Joseph Crowther, Mr. Livingstone Middlemost, Mr. W. H. Armitage, all of Huddersfield, Yorkshire; Mr. H. Town, Mr. Isaac Robinson, Mr. C. G. R. Lee, of London; Dr. Peter J. Rice and bride, of Nanaimo; and Mr. and Mrs. John Hall, late of Nottingham. The above party travel through by the same Pullman, and will reach Victoria in the course of a few days.

BROUGHT TO A CLOSE.

The Baptists Finish Their Labors and Leave for Home.

The Northwest Baptist Convention was brought to a close on Saturday morning, after a session according to the interest of the people and Sunday school work. Mrs. E. G. Wheeler made the opening address and was followed by other delegates. The following resolution and recommendations were adopted:—

Resolved,—That it is the sense of this Convention that our young people's work should be in its organization, relations, methods and aims distinctively Baptistic; to accomplish this we would recommend (1) that the literature used in their work should, as far as possible, be distinctively denominational; (2) that a conference of these young people should be held at least annually; and (3) that one of the sessions of this body should be given to this conference. We ask the attention of the young people to the young people's department in the Pacific Baptist.

Several of the delegates preached in the different churches yesterday morning and evening and all left for home this morning thoroughly satisfied with the work done and their visit generally.

FROM ROCK CREEK.

Encouraging Reports from that Mineral District—A Very Rich Country.

Saturday evening Mr. Thomas Elliot of Rock Creek arrived in this city and registered at the Oriental Hotel. This is Mr. Elliot's annual visit here, and after transacting the business which he has in hand, the buying of stores, etc., he will return. Speaking to a TIMES reporter this morning Mr. Elliot said that mining matters are very brisk on the creek just now, and the prospects for big returns in the future are brilliant.

In quartz mining work is a little slack at the Eureka on account of a lack of machinery, but Mr. Douglas is expected back in December with pumps, winding gear, crushers, etc. It is only in the winter that the heavy parts of machinery can be got in, as the only roads are mountain trails. In the winter heavy goods can be hauled over the frozen snow, and is practically the only time of the year it can be done. The lack of proper roads, said Mr. Elliot, was one of the greatest drawbacks. When Mr. Douglas, who represents the Standard Oil Co., gets the proper machinery in, and good work is being done, a road may be built. There is every probability, too, that a railroad charter will be granted for a line up the Kettle River to within six miles of Rock Creek. Although this charter has been once refused, there is every reason to believe that the charter will be granted next session of parliament. Mr. Gilbert, representing Corbin & Patterson, has lately visited the Rock Creek district, and was surprised at the splendid outlook for mining. He thought that the amount of undeveloped quartz country, and the rich mineral wealth, had only to be known by capitalists to call for the investment of capital.

Considerable placer mining was being done, there being fifteen or twenty men at work on the creek. Fairly good work has been done. The Laura mine has made a good clean up, and the prospects are good for the future. During the season work on the Laura Hydraulic Mine has been more that of getting ready, but next spring full advantage of the high water can be taken. Just now only one shift can be worked as the water is getting scarce. A splendid bed of gravel, which will last for the next ten years, is to be worked over before the mine will be done, and as the further it is gone into the richer it gets, the prospect is encouraging.

One great drawback, says Mr. Elliot, is the lack of mail communication with the outer world by the Rock Creek camps. Only once a month does the mail come in, and such a long interval exists between times of the mail going and an answer being received, that it is almost impossible to transact business by letter. This is a serious trouble and one which will be done away with whenever better roads are built.

At Fairhaven, on the Okanagon river, between Osoyoos and Penticton, there is a fine showing of quartz and considable work is being done. Old miners and practical men state that in a few years more, if the Rock creek district is only opened up, a big mining town will rise in that locality. The richness of the ore is beyond all question, all that is wanted is capital and men of experience to develop the country. Mr. Elliot has brought down quite a lot of dust and nuggets, some of the latter being five ounces in weight. The gold runs from that to very flaky and fine stuff, but is all clean and free from rock.

Nothing so Uncertain as Life.

The late W.C. Hill, of Seattle, Wash., was in apparently perfect health one week ago Saturday, and the following day he passed over to the majority. Supt. of agencies Macgurn, of the mutual Life of New York, has shown us a letter embodying the following facts. Three months ago Mr. Hill insured with his company through General Agent Stinson, at Seattle, for $100,000, and since then he took out additional insurances bringing the total up to $340,000. Eight different doctors examined him and pronounced him perfectly healthy. On Friday, two days before his death, he passed successful examinations for another $100,000 and yet in 48 hours after he was no more. Such a case as this serves to bring home to each one the necessity for leaving his house in order.

To Confer With the Admiral.

This afternoon, by request of Admiral Hotham, Collector Milne, of H. M. customs, Capts. J. G. Cox, Wm. Cox, and Chas. Hackett, paid a call on the admiral on board the Warspite. It is understood that the admiral wished to discuss certain matters pertaining to the sealing season in Behring Sea, and in consequence the above mentioned masters, all of whom have a practical knowledge of the question, were asked to confer with Admiral Hotham.

Another Pioneer Gone.

Mr. Wm. Collinson, sr., dropped dead last week on the road from the postoffice at Plumpers Pass to his home on the east side of Mayne Island. He had been complaining for some time. The deceased came to Victoria before the golden sixties of Cariboo, when Victoria was a palisaded fort of the H. B. Co., bringing with him his nephew, Mr. W. T. Collinson, now postmaster at Plumpers Pass. The deceased was in his 62nd year, a native of Yorkshire and was highly respected

Death by Electricity.

A good deal has been written about the death of Kemmler, the first murderer to be executed by electricity in the United States, but a few lines is all that is written about the deaths by electricity in Victoria. The fourth or fifth victim of this latest life extinguisher departed this life on Douglas street yesterday afternoon, the electric car doing the deadly work. The departed one did not need a funeral or an undertaker, as he was only a little dog, owned by nobody and not having a friend to pick him up after he had been killed.

A Chinese Banquet.

Banquets in Chinatown are things that come very seldom but when they do take place the citizens from one end of town to the other think that the whole populace are out beating tin cans and yelling. One of these festive occasion took place last evening and from 7 o'clock till midnight a noise that could not be beaten by a band of hostile Indians was kept up without a stop. This thing disturbed the people in church, but Officer Irvine thought it was too good a thing for them to disturb the peaceful slumbers of the populace so the grand dinner was brought to a stop by the appearance of that officer in the banquet room.

Employment for Sailors.

A letter has been received in this city from a seafaring man at Canmore, Alberta, who is desirous of again following the deep blue sea. He asks the rate of wages paid, and chance of obtaining employment as a sailor out of this port. He also states that several first class Scotch sailors will come to this coast if employment offers. Just now is a bad time for sailors, as the sealing schooners are paying off their crews. In the spring sailors are in demand, although occasionally men are wanted at Nanaimo for coal ships, and crews are often required for the deep water ships which load lumber at the outports. Wages are on the average $25 per month for a. b's.

Spring Chickens In Demand.

The citizens of Victoria, who raise a few chickens are now warned to get good locks put on their chicken coops, as the festive Chinese who knows that the spring birds are now in good condition for eating are beginning to make their nightly depredations. The first case brought to notice was at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening, when a citizen of Pandora street was disturbed by the barking of his dog and the cackle of chickens. The first thought that came to his mind was that his fine Plymouth Rock fowls which he had so carefully raised were to become the property of some one else, but luckily the thief had been scared off and the citizen got out in time to see him scaling the fence without any chickens.

Police Court Jottings.

The city police court continues to hold quiet sessions, the only cases disposed of being drunks and other trifling changes. This morning two drunks and a case of indecent exposure were the only ones to come up, the former, as usual, being fined $5 and the latter $10. One of the drunks, a sailor, on being informed that people were fined $5 (a £) for getting drunk in Victoria, instead of a shilling, as in the old country, looked a little surprised, but said that he did not know what the fine was in London, as he had never had the pleasure of being fined before.

The case of A. W. Dunsmuir, charged with allowing a nuisance to remain on a lot belonging to him on Yates street, was again remanded as Mr. Luxton, solicitor for the defendant, said that the hole was being filled up.

The case of W. P. Allen was also remanded, as both the Attorney-General and his deputy are out or town. His bondsmen were relieved, however, and he was allowed out on his own recognizance.

QUICK TRIP FROM VANCOUVER.

Superior Connection Between Vancouver and Nanaimo.

The following from the Nanaimo Free Press of Saturday, is printed for the benefit of Victoria wholesalers: Mr. Kelly, the representative of Oppenheimer Bros., of Vancouver, left the city yesterday morning by the steamer Cutch with a large list of orders which he had promised to deliver the same day. True to his word the goods were received by the return trip of the steamer last evening, which speaks volumes for the business ability of this firm and is sufficient commendation to build up their trade in this city. The business portion of the city of Nanaimo are gradually turning their attention towards their neighbors across the gulf, especially as the means of connection are far superior to those at present enjoyed between this city and Victoria. The city has been drummed for a number of years by smart young solicitors, but never has a large order of this description been returned so quick. It almost makes us believe the distance from here to Vancouver is no greater than to Departure Bay. "What will be the benefit of telephone connection is anxiously asked by the merchants of this city." It is to be hoped the question will receive a practical answer by the telephone company taking the necessary steps to carry out their long suggested idea.

Clothing Found.

Police Officer Levin has found two suits of clothes in the bush just outside the city. The clothing is that worn by marines and is stamped with the names of A. P. Parker and N. Orville. One suit is of the kind worn by a "blue" marine, the other is a "red" one. Descriptions of both men were left with the police last Friday, they having deserted from the Warspite. It is believed that both have got clear out of the country.

C. P. N. Steamers.

The steamer Yosemite has been brought into service again and will leave for New Westminster at 6 o'clock to-morrow morning to bring down salmon. She will run on that route until she takes the place of the Islander, which steamer will go north on the 15th inst. The steamer Rainbow will also run to Westminster, commencing next week, and going every other week until all the salmon has been brought down. Thus the Rainbow will go on her Bute Inlet route one week and on the Westminster route the other week.

H. M. S. Pinafore.

Next Monday evening the leading musical people of Seattle will present H. M. S. Pinafore at the Victoria Theatre. Prof. Adderly who has the management of the entertainment speaks very highly of the abilities of the Seattle Amateur Opera Company, and it will be a good opportunity to compare the work of our American cousins with our own. None of Gilbert & Sullivan's opera's achieved the popularity and success that fell to the lot of Pinafore, their first opera, and a revival of it by a good company cannot fail to please. A large house will undoubtedly greet the visitors.

Shoal in the Narrows.

Acting on information received from the pilotage authorities at Burrard Inlet, Captain H. G. Lewis, agent of marine, proceeded to Vancouver on Thursday last in the steamer Sir James Douglas to take soundings. It appears that on her voyage to China last June, the C.P.R. steamer Parthia touched on a ridge hitherto unknown in the First Narrows, Burrard Inlet. Capt. Hulton of H.M.S. Amphion, now at Vancouver, kindly placed at Capt. Lewis' disposal the steam cutter, Lieut. Barrett, R.N., in charge, and with Capt. Gaudin, M. C. J. Johnston, and the harbor master, started to find the shoal, which after some trouble they succeeded in doing. It is nearly mid-channel, with five fathoms of water over it at half tide, or at low tide about 24 feet. The shoal has been buoyed under Captain Lewis' direction, and will no longer be a menace to navigation.

Captured.

Some months ago one of those worthless characters who live on the earnings of fallen women, was summoned to appear at the Police Court and answer to the charge of being a habitual frequenter of a house of ill-fame. At that time he was known to the police as Harry Clark. He failed to appear in answer to the summons, and by request of the superintendent of police a sentence of a month was recorded against him. To-day Sergt. Walker's keen eye spotted Clark, and in an other moment the creature was under arrest and lodged in the city cells. He stoutly maintains his innocence, says he is not the same man, etc., and gives the name of Taylor. Sergt. Walker is just as certain he is the party wanted, and as a habitue of Broad street has visited the party in jail, there is every chance that the sergeant is correct in his capture. A month's work in the chain gang will do the worthless scamp good.

The Wellington Fire.

In reply to the offer made by the union miners to gratuitously assist at putting out the fire in No. 3 shaft should the proprietors require their services, the following reply was received:

WELLINGTON, Sept. 4th, 1890.

Sir, In reply to your communication from the M. and M. L. P. A., offering their services in assisting to check the fire in No. 3 pit.

I would reply as follows: There has been no evidence of actual fire in No. 3 pit. There is, however, evidence of a heating or sweating process going on in the "gob," but every precaution has been taken to prevent the same from breaking out into actual fire, for which purpose we have had sufficient hands.

Thanking the members of the M. and M. L. P. A., for the offer of their gratuitous services. I am sir, Chinese Assurance.

Several weeks ago a Chinawoman arrived at this port and endeavored to pass the customs authorities on a fraudulent certificate, but under cross-examination she broke down and admitted that the certificate was no good. She was accordingly granted a bona fide certificate upon the payment of the regulation $50. She only remained here a few days and then went over to Seattle. A letter has now been received by the customs authorities from one Ah Look, a member of the Chinese firm of Tung Lee & Co., of Seattle, asking that the $50 tax be returned to him, as the woman, who was his wife, did not remain in British Columbia nor had she any intention of remaining when she came here. The customs authorities will no doubt receive the application, which will be promptly consigned to the waste paper basket. The assurance of the almond-eyed Ah Look is something grand. He knows perfectly well that fraud was intended in the first instance, and now wants to get the money back as the trick failed.
